

The numerous phone calls received on a daily basis are very disturbing to our family life. Calls are received during dinner and very often after our children have gone to sleep for the night only to be awakened by a ringing telephone. Many companies do not accept a stern "No" and only hang up to return a call a few days later. The FCC should not allow any laws to pass which would lessen the strength of Indiana's telephone privacy law. We received an average of about 8 calls a day and with the privacy law we are down to only a few a week, so this has clearly helped us from the burden of many unwarranted phone calls.
